Cultural Performer & Storyteller

Quentin Pipestem is a renowned Indigenous cultural performer; storyteller, flute player, and three-time World Hoop Dance Champion from the Tsuut'ina Nation near Calgary, Alberta.

For more than 35 years, Quentin has shared Indigenous culture across Canada, the United States, and internationally through powerful performances that combine championship hoop dance, traditional flute music, storytelling, and personal life experience.

His presentations are more than performances — they are experiences that bring audiences into the spirit, movement, teachings, and resilience of Indigenous culture.
Drawing from the traditions of the Great Plains peoples, Quentin shares teachings about identity, balance, respect, healing,
...and the importance of culture in today's world.

Whether performing at schools, conferences, theatres, rodeos, festivals, or community gatherings, Quentin creates meaningful connections with audiences of all ages through authenticity, humour, emotion, and world-class artistry.

Today, Quentin also works as a Cultural Coordinator, helping to create land-based programming, youth engagement initiatives, and cultural wellness experiences for Indigenous youth and families.
