Author Declaration

Authors submitting a manuscript to Accounting Perspectives must take joint responsibility for the content of the paper, including all wording, methods, data and results. AP encourages broad sharing of research data and tools after publication, to aid replication and to encourage future research.

Please confirm by signing below that the authors jointly agree to the following terms:

- If the paper has more than one author, we delegate responsibility for correspondence with AP, including this declaration of responsibility, to a single member of the author team.
- I (we) understand that after the initial submission, changes to authorship (additions, deletions or changes in order) must be agreed by all authors in writing and approved by the Editor-in-Chief.
- I (we) conducted the research in an ethical manner, including obtaining any necessary institutional ethics clearance for research involving human participants.
- I (we) have not plagiarized. In the paper, we acknowledge clearly and completely all wording, methods, data and results derived from or belonging to others, whether from published or unpublished sources. I (we) understand that AP uses plagiarism detection software on all submissions.
- I (we) disclose clearly and completely any substantial overlap between the submitted paper and other work by members of the author team, whether published or not. The submitted paper is not published or under consideration at any other journal.
- I (we) report clearly and completely in the paper all methods used, all data sources, and all means of data collection and data manipulation, so that an interested and diligent reader, given access to the data sources and analytical tools, could replicate the results reported in the paper. [Data from confidential sources may be masked or described in non-identifying ways, but see also the next point.]
- If the research relies on access to data, tools or sites that are not publicly or commercially available to other scholars, I (we) agree to provide a credible means of verifying the data source or research site, on request from an editor, understanding that this information would be used solely for the purpose of verifying the data description in the paper.
- If the paper uses data, I (we) agree to retain all data and information about its collection and manipulation for at least five years after the print publication date.
- If the research uses a survey, interview or experiment, I (we) submit the instrument or protocol used along with the manuscript, to aid the review process. [Please note that instruments and protocols are not required for final, accepted manuscripts.]
- I (we) acknowledge on the title page all sources of funding that supported the research, and disclose any involvement of or oversight by funding sources in the research.
- I (we) disclose in the cover letter or on the title page any financial, employment or other connections of the authors that could pose a real or perceived conflict of interest in the conduct or interpretation of the research.
